Report Card on Auburn

With Earth Day approaching, we sent our Green Maven to find out just how well our community measures up in the Sustainability Challenge

by Maureen Murphy

According to the web site Sustainlane.com, Portland, OR is the most sustainable city in the country. For years the City's Office of Sustainable Development has pioneered policies and programs that integrate environmental, economic, and social benefits.

Another city working toward sustainability is San Francisco, which became the first city in America to ban petroleum-based plastic shopping bags—suggesting as an alternative that stores offer biodegradable or recycled paper bags, or preferably request that consumers bring their own bags.

The City of Arcata, CA has an ordinance that bans big box retail stores and limits the number of fast food chains allowed within city limits. The intent is to keep local money within the community and to preserve the character of the town.

Though each community must develop its own definition of sustainability, with Earth Day approaching, we were curious to see what our own City of Auburn is doing to build sustainability. We sought answers from three city officials – Megan Siren, in the Auburn Public Works Department, Will Wong, the City's Community Development Director and City Manager, Bob Richardson.

Auburn Public Works Department's Administrative Analyst/Transit Manager, Megan Siren, started our conversation saying she was quite excited to report that Healthy Auburn

Waters, a project launched in 2008 to keep our water healthy, is now going into schools to educate children – some as young as second graders – on protection of our watersheds and water conservation.

Healthy Auburn Waters is encouraging a "green" spring clean-up this year by asking citizens to properly dispose of household hazardous waste and to promote the use of natural cleaners. And businesses have been encouraged to take a pledge to eliminate banned chemicals and to replace them with green alternatives. You can visit www.healthyauburnwaters.org for more information. Siren says

"The City can only be as progressive as the citizens want it to be."

Will Wong, Auburn Community Development Director

that Auburn's storm water is processed at the treatment plant and returned to Auburn Ravine where it is eventually used downstream to irrigate farm fields. Additionally, she says, "The City buys green cleaners, recycled cups for visitors, encourages employees to bring their own mugs and reusable containers, makes double-sided copies and uses recycled content paper," and added that Auburn currently has two natural gas public transit vehicles and one more on order. These buses operate out of the multi-modal station building on Nevada Street designed by local architect Michael Kent Murphy. Megan notes, "Ridership is up this year," although she's not exactly sure of all the contributing factors, she suspects the economy has something to do with it.

The City owns three Toyota Prius automobiles, operates one natural gas-fueled sewage plant truck, and has a gas-fueled street sweeper on its wish list. (In addition to cleaning the curbs, street sweepers keep debris out of creeks). Auburn also owns a compressed gas facility near the transit station to fuel its natural gas vehicles.

Siren says the City is also "in the process of getting solar panels at the waste processing plant and to power the runway lights at the Auburn Airport. City Hall and the Auburn Police Department are also in the process of requesting a solar panel installation. In short, it is a priority of the City Council to create renewable energy."

Will Wong, the City's Community Development Director, stated that the mission of his department is to "Protect, enhance, and expand Auburn's physical, environmental, economic, and historic assets, and to improve and expand its supply of affordable housing."

Walkability—a new buzzword when looking at a city's sustainability—is hot on the agenda. Wong says, "By planning ahead and using experienced design professionals, it is possible to keep people out of their cars by creating a convenient, attractive and safe route of travel from neighborhoods into mixed use commercial zones."

Along these lines, one of the most promising revitalization programs in Auburn is the Downtown Auburn Streetscape project. Designed to create a more walkable pedestrian-friendly face for the city, this project hopes to stimulate more activity and business Downtown and thereby boost the local economy. Unfortunately it was determined that bicycle lanes would conflict with perceived parking needs, so a bike lane was omitted from the Downtown Streetscape plan.

There is currently a focus on the need to reassess the feasibility of creating a more cohesive non-automobile route of travel throughout the town. According to Wong, "In the 1970s and 80s through the early 1990s, Auburn's citizens still viewed themselves as being rural—consequently, there are no sidewalks in many areas. The Council changed positions in the mid-90s and the Planning Commission is now looking at a Trails Master Plan – a non-auto circulation plan. We think this will provide a perfect opportunity for community involvement."

Wong says there are also plans underway to create a more streamlined and less expensive permit process for the installation of solar panels. His department is looking into what other nearby municipalities are doing to help encourage more power independence.

The City of Auburn has a diverse topography and with this comes the challenge of site development. Wong says, "We have to look closely at the topography because every building site is different." The city requires an Arborist's report documenting all the trees on a site before any development is allowed. Wong says, "If a developer needs to do major grading on a site, there is a trade off – they are required to provide open space to compensate."

Wong says he keeps up with legislation at the State level for green initiatives and new information through the League of California Cities – which has resources on what other cities are doing. He feels this allows him to "stay ahead of the curve – to be progressive, cutting edge."

Wong believes, "The City can only be as progressive as the citizens want it to be."

If people want to see a cutting edge decentralized community power generation, incentives for the use of appropriate technology, bike lanes or extensive public transit infrastructure, they need to let public officials know. Too often apathy leads to the lowest common denominator becoming the norm."

How can you participate? Wong invites, "If people want to discuss a topic of concern, a vision for Auburn's future or just to suggest some ideas on how to improve the city, it would be nice if you'd call to discuss it with us."

City Manager Bob Richardson has a broader view of the issues. He says, "The fundamentals of city government are changing and being reassessed. The political and environmental climate is changing and we have to change with it." He adds, "It is up to the citizens to help drive the process and direction of these changes."

Richardson indicated that in the next few months the City will begin goal-setting meetings to determine the direction Auburn will be moving in light of economic and environmental pressures. After this initial step, he says, "It will be time to re-engage with the community. Governmental leaders will want to know what the people want for their town. This is the point where people can be directly involved in shaping their civic future."

Richardson says we can already see the work of volunteers within the community. "The sign on I-80 just before the Maple Street exit that hails the entrance to Old Town is one example. Others include the pedestrian benches in Downtown near Depot Bay Coffee House, the ones with tiles hand crafted by folks at the farmer's market, and the new bus stop shelter near these benches. There is also the beautiful Auburn Park Preserve behind City Hall."

Richardson adds, "There have also been numerous clean-up and beautification projects... all done by volunteers, all examples of how we will continue to move forward." It must be noted that this volunteer corps also included Mr. Richardson, Mayor Mike Holmes and City Council members.

"The goal here," Richardson adds, "is to create a safe, attractive environment with business associations working together to create an enticing mix of business, environmental beauty and sustainability. The importance of shopping local cannot be emphasized enough. Local citizens own retail and service businesses and the City receives sales taxes. It is this loop of goods and services that gives charming towns their spark. It is what sustains a quality of life style."

Richardson concluded by saying, "We have a community here that people love. All aspects must remain healthy for it to continue, and that can best be accomplished when community members get involved."

Sustainability is not something that just happens, it is something we bring about as a community of concerned citizens.

Local Siblings Wage Fight to Reduce Malaria-related Deaths in Africa

Brother and sister team up to help save African children through humanitarian construction, health and relief acts

by Janis Dice

As kids growing up in Auburn, Dan Ernest and his older sister, Carol, vowed to one day devote themselves to helping the children of Africa. It's a promise they kept as they now lead a fight against malaria, Africa's number one killer of children ages five and under.

After spending a two-week vacation helping build churches and schools in Tanzania, Carol and her husband, Ronald McDonald, fell in love with the country and its people. But seeing a greater need there made them want to do more.

They sold their expensive cars and upscale home and co-founded CHaRA, a non-profit organization dedicated to humanitarian construction, health and relief acts. Although they began as spiritual missionaries, their priorities changed once they saw how malaria—a preventable disease—was ravaging the country's youngest children.

"We couldn't just present a gospel without taking care of their physical needs," Carol McDonald says.

Since 2006, CHaRA directors and a core group of volunteers—supported locally by Placer Title and John Mourier Construction—have been providing malaria-prevention education; organizing malaria-treatment centers; and distributing insecticide-treated mosquito netting to rural villages in Tanzania. Working with missionaries, villagers and government leaders, CHaRA also assists with building schools and health clinics; improving water safety; and encouraging orphan sponsorship where resources are limited.

Battling to regain his health after a devastating accident, Ernest eventually joined his sister in this mission, working behind the scenes from his home in Auburn and traveling to Africa as often as possible.

"The main focus of CHaRA is taking the donations directly to the people in need," he explains, which includes picking up supply shipments and personally delivering the goods to clinics and villagers.

But supplies are just one part of the equation; villagers need to be educated on destroying mosquito breeding habitats and using mesh barriers.

"When we got there, people who had received mosquito nets from previous humanitarian efforts were using them as curtains and tablecloths," Ernest recalls. "So we teach them how to prevent mosquitoes in the first place, and how to use the netting properly."

Gaining the support of local health officials and tribal leaders, CHaRA arranged for Dr. Donald R. Roberts, Ph.D, an internationally renowned expert on malaria prevention, to present a series of lectures recently to Tanzanian medical and health-administration personnel. Dr. Roberts advocates indoor spraying of DDT and other insecticides to achieve higher levels of disease control, along with distributing treated netting.

"In the end, success of these efforts will save lives and improve the health of people in Tanzania," Roberts says. "Dramatic results can be achieved when programs spray house walls with insecticides, with or without the distribution of treated mosquito nets. With this combination of methods, malaria deaths virtually disappear and malaria rates plummet."

CHaRA also received approval to launch a program where American doctors, nurses and technicians cross-train their Tanzanian counterparts in modern medical techniques. CHaRA also is coordinating the shipment of donated medical supplies and equipment in an effort to upgrade the country's antiquated facilities.

"People ask why we are doing something in Africa when there are needs here in the U.S.," Ernest says. "I've always believed in charity work and community service: I coached Little League in Auburn for 18 years, supported and sponsored lots of charitable efforts, and was a top KVIE (public television) fundraiser. But Carol and I always felt drawn to doing good work for the children in Africa. And once you've been there and seen the dire situation, and see the positive impact you can make, it changes who you are."

Or, in this case, it compels you to fulfill a childhood promise.

For the Dogs

Auburn Area Recreation and Park District (ARD) will be presenting the first ever "ARD Friend of Recreation Award" to Laura Pinnick at the 2009 State of the Community Dinner. The award is given to the person who has made a significant contribution to parks, recreation and active leisure in the Auburn area.

The District has chosen Laura Pinnick for her tireless efforts in seeing the Ashley Memorial Dog Park through from conception to completion. Laura donated a significant amount of money and thousands of hours to this project.

At the Dog Park's grand opening on April 28, then Auburn Mayor Keith Nesbitt said, "I'm just really proud of this effort. Here's what happens when you stay the course on a dream."

The Dog Park is already a very busy place. Visitors report seeing upwards of 50 dogs at one time with 30 - 40 dog owners gathering to socialize and connect with other members of the community.

Park District Administrator Kahl Muscott described Pinnick as, "The absolute driving force behind getting the Dog Park complete. Because of her dedication, the community now has an extremely popular facility that cost the District very little money to create."

ARD Chairman Curt Smith added, "In the years to come the community will be enjoying the Ashley Memorial Dog Park and never realize it took her super human efforts to bring it into existence."

Rotary Exchange Goes to India

The three Rotary Clubs of the Auburn area are seeking four outstanding professionals to visit India from January 18 to February 17, 2010 as part of the Group Study Exchange (GSE) program of Rotary International. The GSE team will visit the southern tip of India.

The purpose of the GSE program is to promote international understanding and goodwill through personal connection. While abroad, team members stay in Rotarians' homes and have the opportunity to meet their professional counterparts. They also give presentations to Rotary clubs and other groups about their home country.

The Rotary Foundation pays for round-trip airfare, and Rotary club members in the host country provide meals, lodging, and group travel in their district. Team members pay for personal and incidental expenses.

Young adults between the ages of 25 and 40 who are employed full-time in a business or profession and live or are employed in Rotary District 5190 may apply.

For an application, contact Melanie Barton at (530) 906-1624. Applications are due by April 30, 2009.

Meetings to Help Nonprofits

The current economic downturn has had a major impact on Placer's nonprofit sector. The Placer Community Foundation (PCF), along with several other community-minded partners, will be offering a series of Town Hall Meetings to discuss "Navigating through Challenging Times." The meetings are free to participants and provided by PCF, the Teichert Foundation, Placer County Health and Human Services, Propp, Christensen and Caniglia CPAs and the City of Roseville.

"Nonprofit organizations are the life blood of our community," explains Veronica Blake, CEO of Placer Community Foundation. "It is important that we do everything we can to support them during these challenging times."

Steve Weiss, president of The Weiss Group and a seasoned marketing professional and strategist with more than 20 years of experience at some of Northern California's most notable public, private and nonprofit organizations, will be facilitating the meetings.

Nonprofit Executive Directors, board members and management staff of nonprofits are encouraged to attend the meetings at the Maidu Community Center on April 17, May 1, May 15 and May 27. To learn more about these sessions visit the Placer Community Foundation website at placer.org or call (530) 885-4920.

The Other Side of Auburn by Gary Moffat Power Breakfast Serves Up Coffee, Rolls and Inspiration

When more than 100 people showed up at 7 a.m. last Friday and packed the City Council Chambers for a dose of early morning motivational therapy, they weren't there to hear Tony Robbins. No, it was just Mike Lyon, CEO of Lyon Realty; Titan Gilroy, owner of Titan Engineering; and me.

The latest in the quarterly series of Power Breakfasts—early morning community forums sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and the City of Auburn—this event was titled, “Not Business as Usual, Case Studies in Survival.” The idea behind it was simple enough: Deliver a program that would demonstrate how in the face of tremendous pressure from the economy, three area businesses are making significant changes in the way they operate in order to stay competitive... in order to survive.

This was as informative, moving, humorous and motivational as any locally organized business program I have ever sat through, much less participated in. I suspect the Reverend Billy Graham would have been proud, especially at the level of unanticipated emotion invested by one remarkable presenter.

Though Power Breakfasts are normally developed jointly by the City and Chamber, this time out the show was produced entirely by the Chamber. The goal was, the hope was, that the business community would interpret this program as a meaningful deliverable. The expectation was that those who have characterized the Chamber as “the party people,” would have the basis for forming a new impression of this organization's important role in our community.

My view is necessarily colored by the fact that I am a member of the Chamber Board and of its public relations committee, the source of the idea for the event. We sat around a conference table one morning and talked about things we could do to assist small businesses in Auburn, many of whom are being pushed to the brink because of the heightening Recession and the impact of alarmingly diminished revenues.

So the notion of showing how some of their colleagues here are adopting new approaches in their businesses—how they are embracing difficult and risky changes—seemed like a program that would be timely and appreciated... and it was something we could manage quickly. The message was: “If your business model is no longer functioning, you need to make changes—you need to take action and do something—rather than simply wait for the Recession to end.”

Since I am on the committee, and because we have achieved some early results in changes we have made at CarpeVino – my wine shop and restaurant in Old Town – I volunteered to be one of the speakers. Titan Gilroy was an obvious candidate since we were aware of a very compelling story about him that appeared in the Wall Street Journal, as was Mike Lyon, an early harbinger of the real estate melt-down.

Like many people, public speaking is something I detest, but I sucked it up for the team and prepared my speech, and then hoped 3,000 words would be enough to fill the 15 minutes allocated for my pitch. I spoke about how we decided to walk away from CarpeVino's four-star restaurant rating—granted last November by the Sacramento Bee—and switch to small plates, a more affordable approach for diners in a down economy. And I talked about our new Placer & Beyond Tasting Room where the focus is on local wines.

Mike Lyon spoke last, and he was quite the pro with a snappy PowerPoint presentation about the Sacramento real estate market, with an emphasis on the situation in the Auburn area. Mike sounded the alarm in 2005 with his forecast of widespread foreclosures, but not many people listened back then. At the Power Breakfast, however, everyone was all ears when Mike predicted the pain will continue. While we have suffered through the collapse of the subprime market, he said, variable-rate and interest-only loans are just beginning to re-adjust, which will lead to millions more foreclosures, continuing until at least 2012. And, we have yet to reach the bottom of home prices.

Titan Gilroy was the second person to talk. He is an imposing young man—broad-chested with massive arms that give testament to his professional boxing career and a life-long interest in bodybuilding and conditioning. His left arm is covered with a full-sleeve tattoo, punctuated with a giant metal timepiece seemingly welded to his wrist. When he speaks, slowly and purposefully, you cannot help look anywhere but directly into his piercing eyes, which close slightly when he drives home a point.

I fully expected Titan to share his story of building virtually from scratch his specialty metal fabrication company out near the airport. I wanted to hear the details about the launch of his new training facility called “Titans Dungeon,” that shares space in his 35,000-square-foot manufacturing headquarters. I wanted everyone in the building to be impressed with this bold entrepreneur and his compelling, rags-to-riches story of overcoming incredible odds and adversity.

Clean refrigerator gaskets regularly and vacuum the condenser coils twice a year. Your fridge will operate more efficiently and use less electricity.

So, when he started out with: “I don't have a fancy prepared speech, I'm just going to tell you how I do business,” I was—to be honest—more than a bit concerned.

But with an intentness and power that seemed to grab each audience member by the throat, Titan shared his life story—in horrid detail—with honesty and sincerity. It is one thing to survive a childhood of abuse and an early life of tragedy and personal torment. It is another thing altogether to get up in front of 100 neighbors and be witness to the personal toll. And he did not balk at revealing the fact that he spent three years in jail after being involved in a bar fight.

You had to be there to appreciate the pure honesty and sensitivity with which Titan spoke. He sought nothing in return... no business networking, no new clients. What he did was to simply drive home the point that no matter how bad things may appear to be, if you work hard enough and are driven by the love for your family, you can accomplish just about anything.

Titan is an inspiration for us all, and we are very lucky he decided to make Auburn his home.

Saving For His Future

At Community 1st Bank, we believe it's never too early to start saving. Seven year old Jack Stanley, second grade student at Sky Ridge Elementary School in Auburn, learned how his local bank can help him do just that. Jack and his classmates toured the bank and all received a newly minted Presidential $1 coin.

When asked what he was saving for, Jack replied, “Probably Christmas gifts... or maybe a new car!”

Community 1st Bank is happy to help Jack achieve his financial goals. We invite you to visit any of our convenient locations so we may do the same for you.

Common Sense

by Kevin Hanley

Fueled by Guilty Pleasures

Growing up as one of five kids, I learned that chocolate is a commodity to be consumed rapidly while the getting is good. At the two Superbowls of chocolate consumption – Easter and Halloween – there is an anarchic Lord of the Flies feel to the events – eat all the chocolate within arms-reach right now or it will be stolen and eaten by a kid from a more barbarous tribe. To a kid, stopping to wipe off the chocolate smeared on one's cheeks and chin just wastes precious time.

Of course, the adults, our civilized betters, thought otherwise as the moistened paper towel glided across our chocolate-smeared faces.

I nearly forgot about those anarchic days until my wife suggested that I try a piece of chocolate with my morning coffee. I was taken aback. What? Chocolate is not a breakfast food. There are very strict time and place rules about eating chocolate. How decadent! How European! I went through all four stages – Shock, Disbelief, Acceptance, Joy. I like the Joy stage. The guilty pleasure of a nice cup of hot coffee and a piece of chocolate are now a part of my life.

Thanks to brilliant writers at Economist magazine, there is even less reason to feel guilty about drinking as much coffee and eating as much chocolate as we want. Gluttons of the World Unite! In the article “Fueled by Coffee,” (3/17/09), researchers at the University of Nevada at Reno have “found that coffee grounds can yield 10-15% of biodiesel by weight relatively easily.” The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that seven million tons of coffee is consumed every day and these grounds can be turned into 340 million gallons of biodiesel. Commercial production will occur when an entrepreneur arranges to pick up the used coffee grounds every day from the numerous coffee shops and cafeterias and turn the grounds into fuel. After the biodiesel process is complete, the coffee grounds still make excellent compost for the garden.

The Economist also reports in “The Mighty Bean” (3/28/09), “Hedonists have long rhapsodized about the seductive power of chocolate; now cocoa power may light homes as well.” Engineers at New Hampshire's largest electric utility have found a way to take discarded cocoa-bean shells from a truffle-making factory and mix it with coal to produce electricity. The cocoa-bean shells have a thermal value similar to wood. That's pretty amazing.

With the Placer Sentinel opened on the kitchen table, I think I might indulge with a second cup of java and a second piece of chocolate.

CHEERS & JEERS

The Community Speaks...

The Sentinel provides you with a chance to sound off on whatever you feel strongly about. Email cheers or jeers to editor@placersentinel.com or send them to the Sentinel, P.O. Box 9148, Auburn, CA 95604. Please sign and include your phone number.

CHEERS to Crystal at South Auburn Vet. Hospital for going above and beyond in the loss of my beloved dog Lucy. – PG

JEERS to the North Auburn supermarket that requires buyers to have a Club card of pay 1/4 to 1/3 higher for items purchased. Other grocery stores stopped this “bait and switch” form or marketing long ago. – WW

Buy locally grown, seasonal produce to cut down on environmental costs associated with transporting produce to your community from great distances.

SENTINEL MAN HOTLINE!

A New Number Just for Sentinel Man Contest Players! 530-886-0309

Where am I?

Contest Rules & Results

This Sentinel logo is hidden in an ad somewhere in this edition of the paper. (Hint: look for the Sentinel logo in a non-Sentinel advertisement). If you find the Sentinel man in an ad, call (530) 886-0309 by noon, Monday, with your answer. If you leave a message, please speak slowly, spell your name, and leave your phone number. If your answer is correct, we will print your name. The winner of each week's “Where Am I?” game may pick up a gift from The Chocolate Shoppe in Downtown Auburn. All correct entries will be entered (again) into other contests throughout the year.

Our apologies to this week's winner and all the players who found the Sentinel man in the Auburn Drug Co. ad on page 15. Due to computer problems we will have to announce this week's winner and players in next week's edition.

from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the parking lot at Bethlehem Lutheran Church on High Street next to the entrance to the Fairgrounds. This is a rain or shine event, and the only fundraiser for the Club. Further, the proceeds from the plant sale go to fund the Garden Club's scholarship program. There will be perennials, trees, bedding plants, dogwoods, named-variety daylilies, vegetables, garden crafts, bake sale and a special area where Placer High School students will be selling plants they have propagated in class. The Club has been supporting the Placer Ag Program with an annual cash grant. The plant material is locally propagated by members and is right at home in the foothills. Come out and get a healthy start on your garden at incredible prices while supporting the Auburn Garden Club's Scholarship Program. Info: auburngardenclub.org, email the Club at auburn.garden.club@hotmail.com or call Candace Embrey at (916) 797-4940.

Creating a Backyard Wildlife Habitat Saturday, April 25

Explore the Nature Center's certified Wildlife Habitat garden and learn how to turn your yard into a haven for birds, butterflies, frogs and other wildlife with UCCE Placer County Master Gardeners at 10 a.m. in the demonstration garden at the Placer Nature Center, 3700 Christian Valley Road, Auburn. Info: (530) 889-7388.

Managing Natural Resources on Your Property Saturday, April 25
Interested in learning how to get the most enjoyment out of your rural property? The University of California Sierra Foothill Research & Extension Center in Browns Valley is holding a program that will focus on foothill small parcel landowner questions about their property, what fruit trees to plant, how to control weeds, how to enhance oaks and wildlife, how to protect water quality on streams and creeks, how to assess forage production, and how to protect against losing your house in a fire. The program runs from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. A registration fee of $15 covers tri tip lunch, program, and refreshments. No pre-registration required. Info: (530) 639-8800 or visit <http://groups.ucanr.org/sierrafoothill/>.

A Petition for Probate has been filed by Dorothea Mahan in the Superior Court of California, County of Placer.

The Petition for Probate requests that Dorothea Mahan be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

The petition requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows:

5/19/09, at 1:30 PM, Dept 40, at the Superior Court of CA, County of Placer, 10820 Justice Center Drive, Roseville, CA 95678.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk. Publish: Apr 17, 24, May 1, 2009
